Turn Off the Lights is a Chrome extension that can adjust the browser's background brightness level. The extension can be used to make your browsing experience more comfortable by dimming brightness levels while using Chrome browser. The tool can also help you to watch movies without fatigue. Turn Off the Lights - Chrome extension to dim/hide background Are there any other ways to dim the browser's background brightness without having to install an extension? Can this be done through the browser's user interface, and if yes how is it done? Thanks, Joe Great extension. Besides removing the brightness from the browser background, I would like to use it to show a white grid on the top of the browser. I like to have a good contrast when the browser is open and the text is well-aligned. Thanks! Hello. I wanted to dim the background for a long time but I didn't know how to do it. I found this extension on Google Chrome and I started to use it. This is great. Thank you very much for this! Why Google should have made a built-in feature? The default set of Google extensions like GMail, Chrome, etc. use an annoying bright white background, that gets really annoying after a while. At some point, browsing was done in a dark room, at night, with a darker monitor and now everything goes back to bright white pages. I was using Google Mail, Chrome and Docs for 2 years with a bright white screen. My eyes are tired after a while. I love this extension and I want other people to be able to use it. I too am absolutely sick and tired of the bright white background on Google's Chrome. I also use Firefox, Opera and Safari as my browsers. I find this extension is a great way to dim the background on all of those browsers. I find I can still read my email and stuff I am working on, but it is much better for my eyes to read text. The controls are a nice touch. I would add a toggle for an off/on dim mode of the background, for those times when I'm in a dim room and don't want it so dim. But that would only be a small addition. I use Mac OS so I can't comment on the app's settings. I've experimented with other dimming extensions for Mac OS X (Turn off Metamotion, dim the background of the web browser in
